A SONG OF LABOR.

Whom shall we call our heroes?
To whom our praises sing?
The pampered child of fortune,
The titled lord or king?
They live by others labor,
Take all and nothing give;
The noblest types of manhood
Are they who work to live.

Chorus.—Then, honor to our workmen,
Our hardy sons of toil;
The heroes of the workshop,
And monarchs of the soil!

For many barren ages
Earth hid her treasure deep;
And all her giant forces
Seemed bound as in a sleep.
Then Labor's "Anvil Chorus,"
Broke on the startled air,
And lo! the earth in rapture
Laid all her riches here.

'Tis toil that over nature
Gives man his proud control,
And purifies and hallows
The temples of his soul.
It startles foul disease,
With all their ghastly train;
Puts iron in the muscle,
And crystal in the brain!

The Grand Almighty Builder,
Who fashioned out the Earth,
Hath stamped his seal of honor
On Labor from her birth.
In every angel flower
That blossoms from the sod,
Behold the master touches,—
The handiwork of God!

Select Miscellany.

A HIDDEN WITNESS.

"She is positively starving and this money will be the saving of her.

These words were spoken in the course of a conversation between my old friend, Mr. John Irwin, retired civil servant and myself, both sitting on a fine September morning in a little summer-house in the garden of our mutual friend, Rev. Henry Tyson, rector of Northwick-Balham, in the county of Berkshire. The subject of our conversation had been a piece of very flagitious behavior on the part of a wealthy retired tradesman, Harding by name, who lived in the neighborhood. A sum of money amounting to £100 was owing by this man to a widow, living also close at hand, for work done by her husband just before he died. The validity of the claim had been denied by Mr. Harding, and payment obstinately refused.

"I have made it all right, however," said my friend, with something approaching to a chuckle. "It happens that this Harding is to a certain extent in my power. The particulars of a transaction in which he was engaged some years ago, not of the most creditable nature, and all the facts relating to which came before me in the course of my officialcareer, are not only perfectly well known to me, but he knows that I know of them, and is aware that I could even at this day, use them against him if I choose.—Consequently he is always exceedingly civil to me, and when, in the course of a conversation between us yesterday, I explained to him—assuming as I did so dangerous a look which I could see had its effect—that I should take it exceedingly ill if he did not at once consider this poor woman's claim, and forthwith pay her what he had owed to her husband, he turned very pale, and informed me that since a person on whose judgment he could so entirely rely as he could on mine, was of the opinion, after duly considering the claim, that it was a just one, he would at once give up his own view of the case, which had certainly hitherto been opposed to mine, and would without delay discharge the liability. He only begged that he might be spared the annoyance of a personal interview with his creditor, and that I would undertake in my own person to see the widow and transact the business part of the arrangement myself."

"You know," continued Mr. Irwin, "how interested I have always been in this poor soul's case, and you will believe how readily I undertook the charge. This very afternoon the business is to be brought to a conclusion. I have arranged to call on Harding, (who, as you know, lives close by,) at three o'clock to get the money, and I will then convey it with my own hands to the poor woman as a surprise."

"You have never done a better day's work," I said. "How do you mean to go?"

"I shall walk. It is not above a couple of miles. The path across the fields by Garfield Copse is the nearest way—isn't it?"

"Yes, by a good deal," I answered.—"Would you like a companion?"

"Well, I should like one certainly," was my friends answer, "but I feel a little delicacy about introducing a stranger into the business—either that with Mr. Harding himself, or with my friend the widow, who is the proudest and most sensitive woman in the world."

I assented to the justice of this objection, and having some letters to write, got up to go, leaving my friend sitting in the summer-house. As I quitted it, turning sharply around to go into the house, I came suddenly upon a man who was emerging from among the shrubs which formed the back of the little arbor.

He was an occasional helper about the place, and I had noticed him more than once, and not with favor. He was a very peculiar and, as I thought, a very ill-looking man. He was a sly, slouching sort of a creature, who always started and got out of the way when you met him. A man with hollow, sunken eyes, a small, mean, pinched sort of nose, and a prominent, savage looking underjaw, with teeth like tusks, which his beard did not always conceal. This beard, by the by, was one of the most marked characteristics of the man's appearance, it being, as was his hair also, of that flaming red color which is not very often seen, really red, with no pretentions to those auburn or chestnut or golden tints which have become fashionable of late years. The blazing effect of this man's coloring was increased very much by the dress he wore, an old cricketing cap of brightest scarlet. He was otherwise dressed in one of those short white canvass shirts, or frocks, which are much worn by engineers, stockers, and plasterers over their ordinary clothes. There was a great brown patch of new material let into the front of this garment which showed very conspicuously, even at a distance. His lower extremities were clad in common velveteen trousers, old and worn.

Such was the man who appeared suddenly in my path as I left the summer-house, and who disappeared as suddenly out of it a moment after our encounter, gliding stealthily off in the direction of the kitchen garden.

I saw my good friend Mr. Irwin once more before he started on his benificent errand. He was in high spirits and had got himself up in great style for the occasion, with a light-colored summer overcoat, to keep off the dust, and a white hat. I think he had a flower in his button hole.

There was one part of Mr. Irwin's equipment a little out of the common way, and this was a butterfly net, fixed to the end of a stick. My friend was a most enthusiastic entomologist, and when in the country never stirred without carrying with him this means of securing his favorite specimens. I joked him a little on the introduction of his unusual element into a business transaction, suggesting that Mr. Harding would think that he had brought it as a receptacle for the widow's money. "I must have it with me," said the old gentleman, "for if ever I venture to go out without it I invariably meet with some invaluable specimen which escapes me in a heart-rending manner. But," he added, "I'm not going to let Harding discover my weakness, you may be sure. I'll leave it outside among the bushes and recover it when the interview is over."

"Well, good luck attend you any way!" I called after him; "a successful end to your negotiations, and plenty of butterflies."

I had what we familiarly call "the fidgets" that afternoon. I could not settle down to anything. Having tried wandering about the garden, I now took, in turn, to wandering about the house, going first into one room and then into another, looking at the pictures, taking up different objects which lay about, and examining them in an entire purposeless way.

At the top of my friend's house there was a little room in a tower, which was used as a smoking room, and also as a kind of observatory; my host being in the habit of observing the heavenly bodies through his telescope when favorable occassion offered. I remembered the existence of this apartment now, and, feeling that a small dose of tobacco would suit my present condition very well, determined to climb the turret staircase, and enjoy a quiet smoke in the observatory.

The room was charming. There were large windows in it, and the view was most extensive, taking in scenery of a very varied kind—hill and dale, wood, river, and plain. The signs of habitation were not numerous, the country being but thinly populated; still, there were cottages and farm houses scattered here and there, and even one or two villages in the distance. I lighted my cigar and gave up to tranquil enjoyment of the scene before me.

As I sat thus the clock of my host's church struck three. Remembering that to be the hour of Mr. Irwin's interview with Harding, my thoughts reverted to the subject of the widow's debt, and the good-nature which my friend had displayed in giving himself so much trouble and undertaking such a thankless office. My mind did not dwell long on these things, however. I happened to catch sight of the telescope, which was put away in a corner of the room; and being restless, and not in a mood in which total inaction was agreeable to me, I determined to have it out, and examine the details of the landscape which I had just been studying on a large scale.

The day was very favorable for my purpose. The sun was shining, and there was an east wind, a combination which often produces a remarkable clearness in the atmosphere. Circumstances could not possibly be more suitable for telescopic operations, so, placing the instrument on its stand before one of the open windows, I sat down and commenced my survey.

It was a superb telescope, and although I knew it well, and had often used it before, I found myself still astonished at its power and range. I set myself to trying experimente as to the extent of its capacity, taking the time by the church clock of a village two miles off, trying to make out what people were doing in the extreme distance, and in other ways putting the capabilities of the instrument to the test. That done, with results of the most satisfactory kind, I went to work in a more leisurely fashion, shifting the glass from point to point of the landscape, as the fancy took me, and enjoying the delicious little circular pictures which in endless variety seemed to fit themselves, one after another, into the end of the instrument. The little round pictures were, some of them, very pretty. Here was one—the first the telescope showed me—in the front of which was a small patch of purple earth just brought under the plow. A little copse bounded one side of this arable land; there was a very bright green field in the distance; and in the foreground the plow itself was crawling slowly along, drawn by a couple of ponderous and sturdy horses, a bay and a white, whose course was directed by an old man with a blue neckerchief, the ends hanging loose, a boy being in attendance to turn the horses at the end of each furrow and generally to keep them up to their work.

A turn of the glass, and another picture takes its place. A roadside alehouse now. One of the upper windows has a muslin half-blind betokening the guest-chamber, another on the ground floor is ornamented with a red curtain; the tap-room this, where convivial spirits congregate on Saturday nights. The inn has a painted sign; somebody in a scarlet coat, and with something on his head which I can't quite make out; perhaps it is a three-cornered hat, and perhaps the inn is dedicated to the inevitable Marquis of Granby! I recollect now seeing such an inn in one of my walks in the neighborhood. It is the Marquis of Granby, as I well remember. An empty cart is standing in front of the house, the driver watering his horses and beering himself just before the house door, where I can see him plainly.

Another and a more extensive turn, and the little railway station comes within the limits of the magic circle. Not much to interest here; a small white-washed, slate-roofed, formal building, hard and angular and hideous. A lot of sicks piled up against the wall, waiting to be sent off by the luggage train, a great signal post rising into the air, a row of telegraphic poles stretching away in perspective.

Now a prosperous farmstead, with a big thatched house, where the farmer and his family reside, with well-preserved sheds and outhouses; there is a raw-yard too, with cattle standing knee deep, and eating out of racks well found in hay; and there are pigs wallowing in the mire; and there are cocks and hens jerking themselves hither and thither, and pecking, and generally fussing, as their manner is. This picture in its circular frame pleases me well, and so does the next. A gentleman's seat of the entirely comfortable, not of the showy and ostentatious sort. The grounds are large enough to be called a park, and the house lying rather low, as it was the fashion to build a century or two ago, stands in the midst of them, with a trim and pleasantly formal flower garden round about it. It is a red brick house of the Honorerian time, with a rather high slate (green slate) roof, with dormer windows in it. The other windows have white sashes, which are flush with the, wall and not, as in these days, sunk in a recess.

I look long on this scene, and then, not without reluctance, shift my glass, and, turning away from human habitations, begin to examine the more retired and unfrequented parts of the landscape.—The magic circle now incloses nothing but trees and meadows, and little quiet nooks and corners, where the lazy cows stand about in shady places too idle even to feed, or where the crows blacken the very ground by their numbers, unmolested by shouting boys, unscared by even the old traditional hat and coat upon a stick. I come presently to a little bright green paddock, with a pony feeding in it, a refreshing little round picture pleasant to dwell on. There is a pond in one corner of the paddock, surrounded with pollard willows, the water reflecting them upon its surface, as also a little patch of sky, which it gets sight of somehow between the branches.

It is a comfortable and innocent little place this, with a small wood close by, with a haystack near the gate, stay—what is this? There are figures here—two men—how plainly I see them!—But what are they doing? They are in violent movement. Are they fighting, wrestling, struggling? It is so. A struggle is going on between them, and one of the two—he wears a bright red cap—has the best of it. He has his antagonist, who seems to be weak and makes but faint resistance, by the throat; he strikes fiercely at the wretched man's head with a thick stick or club he holds, and, pressing on him sorely, beats him fiercely to the ground. The man who has the best of it—there is something more of red about him besides his cap; it is his beard? does not spare the fallen man, but beats him still about the head—a gray head surely—with his club. Horrible sight to look on! I would give anything to tear myself away from the telescope, or at least to close my eyes and shut out the sickening spectacle. But the butchery is nearly over. The gray-haired man continues yet to struggle and resist, but only for a little while. In a very short time the contest, as I plainly see, will be over. The conquered man, making one more supreme effort, rises nearly to his feet, receives another crushing blow, falls suddenly to the ground, and is still. Merciful Heaven! what is this? Who are these two men? Do I know them? It cannot be that it is my dear old friend lying helpless on the ground, and that the other is the man whom I took note of just now in the rectory garden. It cannot be that this deed of which I have been a witness—inactive, powerless to help or save—is a murder!

I felt for a moment as if all presence of mind and power of action had deserted me. What was I to do? That was all that I could say, over and over again, as I sat still gazing through the telescope with an instinctive feeling that I must not lose one single ingredient of the scene before me. All that happened I must see. I recalled my senses by a mighty effort, and reasoned as men do in a crisis. What was to be done? The place where this horrible deed was being committed was so far off—about three quarters of a mile as the crow flies; more than a mile by any road I knew of—that there could be no possibility of my getting there in time to be of the slightest service. The end, if it had not come already—and I felt certain that it had—must most surely have come before I could traverse that distance. There was but one way now in which I could be of the slightest service, and that was in securing the detection of the murderer. I must remain at my post and watch his every movement, besides endeavoring to render myself certain, so far as the glass would enable me to be so; concerning his appearance and dress. So there I sat, helpless and spellbound, but watching with devouring eyes. There was a sudden stillness where there had been before so much of struggling and movement. The blows had ceased to fall now The deed was accomplished, and there was no more need for them.

The man himself, the murderer, was still, and I made sure of his identity.—There was the red hair, there was the red beard, there was the scarlet cap lying on the ground, there was the canvas frock with the patch in front. There was no doubt. Alas! was there any doubt either about that other figure lying on the grass beside him? The light colored summer coat which he had worn when I last saw him; the white hairs.—It was nearly too much to bear, but a savage craving for vengeance came to my aid and braced up my energies. I dispelled, by an effort of the will, a dimness which came before my eyes, and, straining them more intensely than ever, saw the man with the red cap start up, as if suddenly conscious that he was losing time, and set himself to work to rifle the body of his victim. As far as I could see he was engaged in emptying the poor old man's pockets, and once I thought I saw the gleam of something golden; but this might have been fancy. At all events he continued for some time to turn the body over and over, and then, having, I suppose, satisfied himself with what he had secured, he got up, and dragging the corpse after him, made his way to the little wood close by, and entering it, disappeared from sight. And now, indeed, a crisis had arrived when it was difficult in the extreme to know how to act What if that disappearance were final? What if he should get out of the wood at the further extremity and I should see him no more?

The Hon. Edwin M. Stanton takes a view of the foreign policy which should be adopted by our Government that will be heartily approved by every genuine American. According to the Washington correspondent of the Cinnatti Commercial, he has expressed himself in the following manner:

"The fact is, the time has come when the interests and dignity of our Government call for some other foreign policy than that of cowardice. While non-intervention is our better course, it ought to be an armed non-intervention, ready to strike and not beg when our interests are touched. We have been too long regarded as a nation of shopkeepers, willing to suffer wrong and put up with insult rather than be at the expense of a war. This is paying a premium on aggression, and we cannot get our rights or command respect as long as it continues.

"It is time to run up the American flag, and not keep it locked away in legations as a precious relic, sacred to the eyes of the initiated. Nor should it be flourished as it was over the barricades in Cadiz the other day, for which the press here is so loud in its praise. What that fellow was doing there as an American Consul, with the American flag, is more than I can make out. I am willing to bet that at the moment it appeared, the republicans were giving the royalists a sound thrashing. I'll venture to say that, if the truth could be known, it is the old story.

"The moment a diplomatic agent of ours reaches the shore of Europe, he softens into an humble admirer of despotic governments, and if he brings out our flag, it is in behalf of our enemies. While the utmost prudence and cautious wisdom should be exercised in treating these complicated questions connected with our foreign affairs, it is our interest, and will prove good economy in time, to make these governments realize that we are as ready to strike for our rights as we were willing to stake our existence on the suppression of domestic insurrection."

This is as wise as it is manly, and it is refreshing to hear such language from a statesman as prominent as Mr. Stanton.

Is There a God?

How eloquently does Chateabriand reply to this inquiry! There is a God!—The herd of the valley, the cedars of the mountains bless him; the insects sport in his beams; the elephants salute him with the rising orb of the day; the birds sing of him in the foliage; the thunder proclaims him in the heavens; the ocean declares his immensity; man alone has said, "There is no god!" Unite in thought at the same instant the most beautiful objects in nature; suppose you see at once all the hours of the day and all the seasons of the year; a morning of Spring and a morning of Autumn; a night bespangled with stars and a night covered with clouds; meadows enameled with flowers and forests hoary with snows, fields gilded by tints of autumn; then alone you will have a just conception of the universe. While you are gazing on that sun which is plunging under the vault of the west, another observer admires him emerging from the gilded gates of the east. By what inconceivably magic does that good star, which sinking, fatigued and burning, in the shade of evening, re appear at the same instant, fresh and humid with the dews of morning? At every instant of the day the glorious orb is at once rising resplendent at noonday, and setting in the west, or rather our senses deceive us, and there is, properly speaking, no east, no west, no south in the world. Everything reduces itself to a single point, from whence the king of the day sends forth a triple light in one substance. The bright splendor is perhaps that which nature can present that is most beautiful; for while it gives us an idea of the perpetual magnificence and resistless power of God, it exhibits at the same time a shining image of the glorious Trinity.

A Thought for Young Men.

All thinkers and careful observers, says the Harrisburg Telegraph have noticed the gradual and very strong tendency of some business men, and especially our young men, to a restless disposition. There are many causes for this. In common with the rapid march of events, inflation has pursued its course, invading not only the walks of commerce, but has permeated almost the entire mental range of the striving millions. The rush for riches may have abated somewhat within the past few months, yet the unsatisfied thirst exhibits itself and surges to and fro at the mere intimation or possible hope of obtaining a fortune. Not the least feature of this deplorable mental excitement is the assumed necessity to obtain wealth immediately.

All substantial fortunes are obtained by dint of patience and the power of system and reasonable economy; the result of energy coolly and judiciously applied. Hundreds are looking forward to the coming spring, definitely or indefinitely, for grand developments, on some new line of enterprise, at all events to a change suggestive of more "material aid." That which is doing well or reasonably so, is not satisfactory. The brain is heated, while cupidity runs riot with its crazed victim.

The wheel may have to be reversed to check this unreasonable phase of human nature—then comes both mental and material depression.

Let it be borne in mind that the most solid success comes from solid labor. Young man, be cheerful, and thank God for the blessing you have; be prudent, and patient, and cultivate that calmness and deliberation which foreshadows power and guarantees future success.

Realization of Duty.

Prof. Upham is the writer of the following impressive incident of ocean travel:

"As we were about to start, I saw the captain moved to an elevated position above the wheel; and it was interesting to see how quickly and completely the inward thought or purpose alters the outward man. He gave a quick glance to every part of the ship. He cast his eye over the multitude coming on board the ship, among whom was the American ambassador to England, who, if the captain may be said to embody the ship, may be said with equal truth to embody in his official person a nation's right and honor. He saw the husbands and wives, the mother and children, intrusted to his care; and his slender form, as he gave the orders for our departure, seemed at once to grow more erect and firm; the muscles of his face swelled, his dark eye glowed with a new fire; and his whole person expanded and beautified itself by the inward motion. I have often noticed this interesting phenomenon; and have come to the conclusion if man, or woman either, wishes to realize the full power of personal beauty, it must be by cherishing noble hopes and purposes—by having something to do, and something to live for which is worthy of humanity, and which by expanding the capacities of the soul, gives expansion and symmetry to the body which contains it."

In reply to a young writer who wishes to know "which magazine would give the highest position quickest," the Pittsburg "Express" says a powder magazine, if you contribute a fiery article."

NOTICE.

We send out this week a copy of our paper to a number of our friends and acquaintances who, as yet, have not become subscribers, with the hope that they will read it and subscribe for it. If you do not wish to subscribe, you need not return the paper to this office, as we will not continue to send it more than once or twice, unless you become a subscriber, and notify us accordingly.

We have been too busily engaged in getting our office in order, and the material for the publication of our paper, to visit the townships, and to call personally upon our Republican friends. We may do so hereafter; but we request you not to wait for this.

With the paper we send you a Prospectus upon which we hope you will write your own name, and get the names of as many of your neighbors, as you can conveniently, and send them to us without delay, and thus aid in the support of our enterprise, and in he dissemination of Republican principles.

To Our Patrons.

As we have adopted the System of Cash Payments in advance for subscriptions, we expect our regular subscribers to remit to us at once the amount due for the current year. We shall make it a rule to stop the papers of those neglecting this notice after the third number, and hope, by treating all alike, that no exception will, or can, be taken to a course that is necessary to newspaper success in these times.—We also hope to receive orders for the paper from a large number of our citizens whose names are not yet on our books. Gen. Theodore Gregg has kindly consented to act for us in receiving orders for subscription, advertising and job work, and orders given him will receive prompt attention. Advertisers, and others, desiring matters inserted in the REPUBLICAN should have them in the office on Monday of each week, at the latest.

THE Clinton Democrat, an excellent paper of the kind, and edited by our very clever friends, J. W. & W. P. FUREY, contains the following in regard to JOHN SCOTT, Esq:

"The Pennsylvania Legislature has "elected Hon. John Scott, of Hunt"ingdon county, United States Sena"tor to succeed Hon. Charles R. Buck"alew, who retires. Mr. Scott is per"haps as unexceptionable to the De"mocracy as any man, the Radicals "could have selected, and we are de"cidedly glad that they have given us "a gentleman of some brains and at "least with a reputation for honesty. "Mr. Scott is highly spoken of by his "party papers, and up to 1863 was an "active Democratic Politician. Why "is it when the Radicals want a man "of talent they always select him from "among those who have formerly been "members of the Democratic party?"

We will answer your question by asking another. Why is it that the men of brains, and those who possess a "reputation for honesty," all desert the Democratic party? "That's what's the matter." The men of brains and of reputation have left your party in such numbers that there are but few, if any, left. You are in a hopeless minority. Why? Simply because the honest leaders, and leaders of reputation—all the JOHN SCOTTS—have left your party. Remaining with you, to your discomfiture, and the disgrace of your party, are the BIGLERS, the WOODWARDS, the CLYMERS, the VALLANDIGHAMS, &c., who were with the rebels, in word and in action during the rebellion. The people are loyal; so is JOHN SCOTT; and for that reason he was elected U. S. Senator.

IF Gen. BUTLER, says the Pittsburg Commercial, means to do the honest thing in our finances, he certainly is unlucky in the impression he has made on the country. The almost universal conception of his financial plan is that it does not accord at all with the purpose of paying honestly what we owe, but is repudiation, intentional and certain. The New York Post frees its mind in the following plain fashion:

"Gen. Butler has now completed his financial scheme. He set up in business with a proposition to pay the Government's promises not due, in promises already broken. He ends by demanding that the people shall accept as a substitute for money promises to pay money which are never to be redeemed. Having no common grounds on which we can argue with Gen. Butler, we shall not undertake to discuss his plan. If we are to have a law authorizing all debtors to cheat their creditors, let us make it simple. Gen. Butler's scheme is too complicated.—It is as though a burglar should take the trouble to climb up on the roof of a house and crawl down the chimney when the door is open."

THE Round Table presents an interesting summary of the net earnings of our gold and silver mines during 1868. According to the table presented, the yield for 1868 may be stated thus:

California	$20,000,000	Colorado	$4,000,000
Nevada	18,000,000	Wash'n	1,000,000
Montana	12,000,000	Arizona	250,000
Idaho	6,000,000	N. Mexico.	250,000
Oregon	5,000,000
Total			$66,500,000

If our financiers and law-makers would only devise some method whereby one-half of this amount would be retained in the country, instead of shipping it to Europe in payment of articles that we are abundantly able to manufacture at home, the prosperity of the country would be promoted.—What we want is a protective tariff.

A Retrospect and a Prospect.

When the Republican party, upon the violation of the old Missouri Compromise, first began to take form and strength from the aroused indignation of the outraged freedom-loving North, there were few men, at first, bold enough to brave the contumely heaped upon those who were stigmatized as Abolitionists and black Republicans. But the true principles and time-honored doctrines of the fathers were yet alive in the hearts of their sons, and amidst, and in spite of, vituperation, prejudice and slanders, the new advocate of equal rights, and law and order, of Freedom for the land, and protection for the citizen, alike and everywhere, grew and strengthened, and drew to its ranks, and rallied around its banners, the active, the strong, the intelligent, and especially the enterprising young men of that part of the nation, where speech, the press, and opinion were free. Assailed as the disunion party, it came to be the Union's only organized defender, and ultimate savior. Denounced as the foe of Slavery, everywhere, it was compelled at last, even against its will, to make good the accusation, to save the nation from dismemberment by the men who were determined to make human bondage universal and eternal in the land.—Anathematized as the legitimate successor of Know Nothingism, it first exhibited its greatest strength by drawing to its support the great foreign German population of the vigorous Northwest, and by continuing to hold them true to its free principles, all through its eventful history. Fighting for the eternal principles of right, against long instilled, carefully fostered, and persistently excited prejudices, with half the land closed against its presses, and advocates, by lawless and unscrupulous violence, in the face of all, and in spite of all, this great party went on conquering, and to conquer. And when its enemies despaired of defeating it before the forum of the people, when even prejudice and violence failed to check the triumphant march of its solid columns of thinking freemen to the full control of the Government, the liberty-hating, aristocratic secessionists, who ruled, and used the Democratic party, throwing off their long-worn masks, repudiating their long-pretended devotion to the Constitution and the Union, appealed from the only lawful authority in Republican Government, the will of the majority, and set up the sword as the arbiter of the future of our country. The Republican party were no more dismayed by the new tactics of its enemies, than by the old appeals to ignorance and prejudice, violence of mobs, and proscription, and hates of the narrow-minded and selfish. Entrusted with their country's destinies, the Republicans, albeit with hesitation and protest against the unholy attack made, without cause, upon all that was sacred in our institutions, met war with fighting, strengthened by the true lovers of their country, whom party ties had, till then, held within the ranks of the party that so fiercely before had fought against their progress. Armies marshalled by the greatest of Generals, almost all Republicans, guided by the councils of our party's greatest statesmen, cheered and sustained by the Republicans as an organization alone, and discouraged, opposed and villified by the degenerate Democracy of the North, who extended the hollow sympathy of cowardly neutrals to a foe they had not courage to take up arms to assist, brought victory to union, to liberty, to equal rights and equal laws.

Triumphing over the cowardly assassination of one chieftain, and despicable treachery of another, freed from the company of the mercenary and corrupt time-servers who went out from our camp with the arch-traitor, after the loaves and fishes of petty office, in our next great civil contest before the high tribunal of this great, free people, under the lead of our noblest Captain, we have won the greatest and grandest of our victories, and scattered our enemies, in confusion, dismay, and utter defeat.

And now, with all the trophies of our great successes about us, with great States, and a whole free Nation at our disposal, what is the prospect that opens to our party? No man now denies connection with it. No man disowns its name, or cares for the vilest epithets its vilest foes may heap upon it.

With the harmony, that always attends real devotion to a great cause, secured to our councils, and everywhere exhibiting itself, with our glorious history, our genuine strength, what may we not hope to accomplish? We shall guide the destinies of the Nation for many years, we shall rescue all the few remaining States from the slough of Copperheadism, and the mire of treason. Our county will bid a final farewell to modern Democracy, and join the victorious column of true Republicanism. The peace that has come will be fixed to stay. Texas will be regenerated; Mississippi will be redeemed; Virginia will be raised again to her ancient glory, and even Kentucky be disenthralled and civilized. Freedom in deed and in truth will once more possess our Maryland, and light penetrate the Cimmerian shades of little Delaware and hapless Jersey. There is brightness ahead for true Republicans; there are easier and grander victories; there is a higher and nobler history; all we need do is to labor for our cause, be true to our principles, and fulfil our several parts in the great work given us to do in this the grandest period of human history, and future ages will dwell upon and be taught by the story of our struggles, our triumphs and our rewards.

The Watchman, as well as the entire Democratic press of the country, are constantly harping on the subject of TAXATION, heavy taxes, &c. The fact is, they should be ashamed to write a line, or say one word on the subject. Every line written by those men upon that subject, only tends the more to expose their own wickedness and oppression heaped upon the tax payers by Democratic mis-rule.

Pennsylvania, from 1790 to 1854, was ruled and governed by the Democratic party. It was an unbroken rule, except nine years. Governor Heister, Federalist, was elected in 1820, and served three years. Governor Ritner, anti-Mason, was elected in 1835, and Governor Johnston was elected in 1848, and served one term. So that it may truthfully be said that, from 1790 till 1854, making sixty-four years, the Democrats had full sway in the Legislative halls of the State. For during the administrations of Heister, Ritner and Johnson, the majority in the Legislature was Democratic, so that reform was impossible on the part of these opposition Governors.

What was the result of this long, and almost unbroken reign of the Democratic party? When Wm. Bigler, the last of this unbroken line of Democratic Governors retired from the Gubernatorial chair in 1854, he left a debt of "forty-one millions of dollars" to the State—a Democratic legacy for the tax payers. This whole debt we charge upon the Democratic party, contracted and forced upon the people by the leaders of that party, in the interest of soulless corporations, and corrupt speculators. Gov. Bigler himself made an independent fortune. Will any honest tax payer tell us how that debt was made, and how it became necessary, when PEACE reigned throughout our boarders? You cannot answer. Ask Gov. BIGLER, Judge WOODWARD, W. A. WALLACE or JNO. H. ORVIS, your Acknowledged leaders why, and how! it became necessary to inflict a debt of FORTY ONE MILLIONS of dollars of debt upon our State in ordinary times, and in times of universal peace? They will refuse to answer. They will, however, attempt to satisfy your mind by appealing to your prejudices and say: Oh, it was the RADICALS, the nigger worshipers, &c. Will such base hypocrisy, and downright misrepresentation satisfy the intelligent men of the Democratic party? We think not.

In 1854, when Gov. BIGLER retired, Gov. POLLOCK, Whig, and Republican, went into power. Since that time this enormous Democratic debt has been steadily on the decrease, so that, notwithstanding the war, which cost the State over six millions of dollars, it has been brought down to nearly thirty two millions of dollars. With the same economy and no war, our Republican Governors would have, by this time, reduced the debt to a merely nominal sum. But, as it is, they have done well. Six millions of war debt paid, and over nine millions of the Democratic State debt paid.

Nor is this all. The personal taxes have been reduced, and the tax on REAL ESTATE removed entirely. The farmer and small owner now pays not one cent of land tax in Pennsylvania.

Gov. GEARY, during the last year, has paid off and reduced the Democratic State debt $4,417,463 64. Tax payers of Central Pennsylvania, think over these facts and figures. This is the work of the Republican Governors—Republican administrations. This is our PLATFORM, and upon it we intend to enter the coming Gubernatorial campaign. It is the strongest, purely State issue, ever presented to the people.

Our people will look at, and examine for themselves, the record of the two parties. The Democratic party and the State debt. The Republican party and no tax on real estate, the protectors and defenders of the National flag and honor.

THE press of the State, generally, are severely criticizing the Legislature for extravagance in continuing the job of the Folders and Pasters at an expense of over $30,000, when Messrs. Rauch and Cochran, of Lancaster, offered to do the work for one fourth that sum. We join with them in condemning this wasteful provision made in the interest of the Legislative hangers-on, and suggest that the true remedy is a very simple one. Let all such jobs be given to the lowest responsible bidders, after due notice, and approved security be required for the performance of such contracts.—Legislators who do not make a serious attempt to stop these Treasury leaks in State and Nation, will hear before long, a species of popular thunder that will be apt to cause them to disappear in terror from the political arena.

Congressional News.

SENATE.—Petition was presented for removal of political disabilities of Chas. Cattell. A bill to amend representation of the people in Congress was referred to a select committee. The bill providing for removal of the remains of Mr. Coggswell to this country was passed, as was also a bill relating to habeas corpus. The bill providing for the execution in the District of commissions issued by the courts of States and Territories or foreign nations, and for taking depositions to be used in said courts, was reported back from the Dirtrict Committee. The House concurrent resolution giving certain parts of the Capitol for the inauguration ball was rejected. Another long discussion was had on the Miss Murphy claim. A resolution was adopted appointing a teller on part of the Senate to count votes for President and Vice President.

The Senate Finance Committee was occupied for a long time on the 13th inst., in debating the many different propositions pending before them relative to funding the national debt by long loans with lower than the present rates of interest, and the resumption of specie payments, without agreeing to anything definite. It is evident that the committee will not be able to arrive at any definite conclusion on the subject before the end of the session.

The Senate Committee on Agriculture, to which was referred a resolution of inquiry as to the expediency of authorizing a committee of five members of the Senate on education, reported, "that having duly considered the resolutions so referred to them, they are of the opinion that such committee should be added to the standing committees of the Senate." The resolution has not yet been acted upon.

The Senate Committee on Commerce considered, on the 18th inst., the bill for the improvement of rivers and harbors, and decided to allow the estimates of the Secretary of War, which were based on the report of Government engineers. The million and a half dollars passed last year for the completion of works absolutely necessary, are deducted from the amount now recommended to be allowed.

The President presented, on the 18th inst., a memorial of numerous citizens alleging that great frauds were committed in various parts of the Union in the late elections, and praying for such amendments to the naturalization laws as will tend to prevent such frauds in the future.

Mr Trumbull, of Ill., presented the memorials of the medical superintendents of institutions for the insane in the western States, setting forth that the medical superintendents of hospitals and assylums for the insane in the lately rebellious States took no active part in the rebellion, and praying that they be relieved of political liabilities.

Mr. Morrill, of Vt., presented the petition, of Duncan, Sherman & Co., Dabney, Morgan & Co,, E. D. Morgan & Co., and about two hundred other merchants and business men of New York; Thomas Robins, Edward M. Lewis, and Joseph Patterson, bank Presidents of Philadelphia, and about two hundred and thirty other merchants and business men of that city; E. A. Presbury, Enos Briggs & Co., H. K. Frothingham, and about one hundred and sixty other merchants and business men of Boston; and W. Coolbaugh, E Hempstead, C. T. Wheeler, and one hundred and ninety other merchants and business men of Chicago, praying for the enactment of a law requiring that hereafter all purchases or sales of the loans or bonds of the United States on account of the U. S. shall be made by inviting public competition thro'gh advertising for proposals, and that sales of gold be made at public auction by an authorized official of the Treasury Department, at a time and place duly authorized. Referred to Committee on Finance.

Mr. Sumner, of Mass., presented a petition and remonstrance of merchants of Boston against the renewal of the reciprocity treaty.

Also memorial of claimants under the late treaty negotiated with Venezuela, in which they ask the legislation by Congress to secure to them their claims under the award recently made, and asking Congress to pay their claims in advance of any money that shall be received under the awards.

HOUSE.—Mr. Brooks, of N. York, presented the memorial of J. Hansen, asking the interposition of the U. S. Government with Prussia for indemnification for the violation of a contract with him in the matter of the Holstein ship canal. Referred to Committee on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Kelley, of Pennsylvania, presented the petition of two hundred and fifty citizens of N. Y., praying Congress to propose an amendment to the Constitution securing the right of suffrage to citizens without distinction of race or color.

The Speaker proceeded to call the States and Territories for bills and joint resolutions.

Under the call, bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read twice, and referred as follows:

By Mr. Purham, of Me., relating to the operation of the Pension laws. To Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. Poland, of Vt., providing for the issue of U. S. bonds, retiring U. S. notes and for a free system of the national banking.

The bill proposes the issue of coupon registered bonds to the amount of one thousand millions of dollars, redeemable in coin after thirty and fifty years respectively; the thirty-year bonds to bear interest at four and a half per cent. in coin, and the fifty-year bonds at 4 per cent. The bonds to be exempt from national, State, and municipal tax, except income, and to be exclusively used in payment or exchange of outstanding bonds or notes that have fallen due, or that bear interest at higher rates. The Secretary of the Treasury is to retire and cancel all United States notes now outstanding, by there conversion in such bonds. Circulating notes are to be issued to the national banks as fast as the United States notes are cancelled, until the amount of United States notes outstanding shall be reduced to one hundrd millions of dollars. The national banks hereafter to make deposits for security of circulation in the bonds provided.

By Mr. Poland, of Vermont, allowing the defendants in criminal cases to testify. To the Committee on the Revision of the Laws.

By Mr. Butler, of Massschusetts, relating to church property in the lately rebellious States. To Committee on Reconstruction. It proposes that where church property has been given to Africans the trustees thereof shall be elected by the congregation.

By Mr. Banks, of Massachusetts, to prevent the alienation to foreigners of grants or privileges from the United States. To Committee on Commerce.

Another Talk with Grant.

The correspondents of the newspapers have so much to say about Grant and his views and opinions of things in general, that are false, that we pay very little attention to anyof their statements in regard to what Gen. Grant has said, will say, may say, or do; but we clip the following last talk with Gen. Grant, simply because, if he did not say it, he should have done so. It is certainly the right talk coming from the right source:

"A prominent citizen of St. Louis, just from Washington, describes a half-hour interview with General Grant, which shows some of the characteristics of the President elect in a stronger light than anything that has been said or written in a long time. During the conversation a Senator and Judge from Louisiana, were introduced, who came to consult with the General in regard to the government indorsing some State bonds for the improvement of the levees in Louisiana.

"The General said he hoped the Government would not do it, and added, 'while we are discussing on all sides how the national debt is to be paid, I shall oppose any increase of the national obligations. I never knew a government to become responsible for any amount that it did not ultimately have to pay.'

"After some further remarks, designed to win the General's favor, the Judge said millions of acres of the best land in the world are subject to overflow.

"Gen. Grant replied: 'Let them overflow, and let them stay under water until their owners are willing that Northern men and Northern capital should come in and protect and improve them. Northern men with ample capital are ready to make a garden of your State, and you won't let them do it.—Your large landholders are as hostile to the United States government today as they have ever been, and if that government should rebuild their levees, it would not change them a particle. I know no way the government could have adopted for rebuilding the levees but to have confiscated the lands of those engaged in the rebellion, and used the proceeds to restore the country. As that was not done, nothing remains but to set your negroes to work and invite in and welcome Northern men.'

"'General,' said the Judge' 'the negroes won't work.'

"'Won't work,' General Grant quietly replied: 'they'll work if you pay them for it. Am I not right?' He added: 'Is there not much hostility to Northern men that it amounts, in most sections of the State, to practical exclusion of them from the agricultural interests of the country? Is there not an unwillingness to divide up the lands and sell in small parcels to those who might immigrate? And is there not a general tendency to secure the services of the negroes without prompt, adequate compensation?'

"'I must say,' said the Judge, 'that there is more or less truth in all these points.'

"'Then,' said Grant, 'I think you will have to build your own levees or wait under water until you are willing men should come in who will build them.'"

THE MAGNANIMITY OF REAL WORTH.—Those who have the fewest resources in themselves naturally seek the food of their self-love elsewhere. The most ignorant people find most to laugh at in strangers; scandal and satire prevail in small places; and a propensity to ridicule the slightest or most palpable deviation from what we happen to approve, ceases with the progress of common sense and decency. True worth does not exult in the faults and deficiencies of others: as true refinement turns away from grossness and deformity, instead of being tempted to indulge in an unmanly triumph over it. Raphael would not faint away at the daubing of a sign-post, nor Homer hit his head the higher for being in the company of a "great bard." Real power, real excellence does not seek for a foil in imperfection; nor fear contamination from coming in contact with that which is coarse and homely. It reposes on itself, and is equally free from envy and affectation.

What Our Exchanges Think of the "Republican."

It is always encouraging to have the good opinion of friends; but the good opinion of educated men, such men as are at the head of, and who control the newspaper-press of Pa., to-day, is a compliment worth publishing to the world. While we confess that it is a tax upon our modesty, we nevertheless feel that it is a duty to publish what the press, in general, think of us. Here are the notices.—Read them:

"Bellefonte, on the 6th of this month gave birth to a new loyal paper-The REPUBLICAN-a journal which evidences in its initial sheet energy, vigor and brilliant editorial ability. Center county was one of the coffee-pot districts in the recent campaign, and we recognize in the prompt appearance of a new paper devoted to the pure principles of Republicanism the legitimate fruit of those outrages. In the end corruption damages even the Democratic party."—Forney's Phil a. Daily Press.

"The Bellefonte Republican is a new weekly just started by W. W. Brown and A. B. Hutchison In their salutatory the editors promise many fine things, which we hope they will not forget in the future. Of course the paper is intensely Radical, for Brown could't live long outside of "isms."—Democrat, Lewistown

Just here, let us say to the editor of the True Democrat, if you would adhere a little closer to Jeffersonism your paper would not be so full of false—democracy and other Diabolisms. eh?

"The Bellefonte Republican is the title of a new paper established in that place by Messrs. W. W. Brown and A. B. Hutchison, the first number of which is on our table. It presents a very fair typographical appearance and the gentlemen conducting it bring with them an amount of journalistic experience and ability sufficient to render it a first-class political paper. We wish them abundant success, both pecuniarily and politically.—Journal & American Huntingdon Pa.

"The Bellefonte Republican, a new paper started at Bellefonte, Centre county, Pa, made its first appearance last week. It is a neatly printed eight column sheet, and judging from the looks of the paper it is destined to prove a success to its proprietors, The Republican is edited by Messrs. W. W. Brown and A. B. Hutchinson. We wish its proprietors abundant success, and congratulate the citizens of Bellefonte in thus securing in their midst a right lively paper.—Philipsburg Journal.

"We have received the first number of a new Republican paper published in Bellefonte, by W. W. Brown and A. B. Hutchison, called the Bellefonte Republican. Brown is one of our old chums in the harness, a ready writer, fluent talker, and clever fellow generally. We are glad to welcome him back into the profession, and hope Republicans of Center county will support him liberally."—Jersey Shore Vidette.

"We are in receipt of the first number of the Bellefonte Republican, edited and published by Messrs. Hutchison & Brown. The paper reflects considerable editorial ability, and mechanically augers well with its cotemporaries in that place. We welcome the Republican to our exchange list, and wish its proprietors abundant success.—Tyrone Herald.

"The Bellefonte Republican is the name of a new radical paper, which last week made its appearance, flying the names of W. W. Brown & A. B. Hutchison as editors. The Republican makes quite a lively appearance, and promises to be a spirited sheet, battling for the blackest kind of niggerism, worthy the zeal of Sambo himself."—Reporter Centre Hall.

"We have received the first copy of a new Republican paper published at Bellefonte, Pa, called the Bellfonte Republican, by Messrs. Brown & Hutchison. It contains 32 columns, and presents a neat appearance. We bespeak for them a liberal patronage; and trust their labors will have a good effect in the county in which it is published."—Courier, Freeburg.

"W. W. Brown & A. B. Hutchison have commenced the publication of a new Republican paper at Bellefonte, under the title of the Bellefonte Republican. Both gentlemen, we believe, have had some experience in editorial matters, and they present a lively and interesting paper.—Muncy Luminary.

"We have received the first number of the Bellefonte Republican, a large well printed and ably edited Republican paper W. W. Brown and Capt A. B. Hutchison-editors and proprietors. The Republican should receive the earnest support of the Rads. of Centre county.—Monitor Huntingdon Pa.

"The first number of the Bellefonte Republican, made its appearance last week. It is edited and published by Brown & Hutchison, and presents a neat appearance mechanically; politicaly it is of the Radical order. There are now six papers published in Centre county.—Berichter.

"The "Bellefonte Republican" is a new paper started in Bellefonte, by Messrs. W. W. Brown A. B. Hutchison. As its name indicates, it advocates the Republican cause; it is neat in its make-up, and editorially evinces ability. Success to it, in all respects. Lewisburg Chronicle.

"We have received the first number of the Bellefonte Republican, a large, well printed paper of the Radical persuasion, W. W. Brown and A. B. Hutchison editors. We wish it much success pecuniarily.—Dem. Standard Hollidaysburg Pa.

"A new paper, styled the Bellefonte Republican, has been started in Bellefonte, by W. W. Brown and A. B. Hutchison. The first number has been received. It is neat in appearance and well edited.—Altoona Tribune.

—The first number of the Bellefonte Republican, a new paper published by Messrs. Brown & Hutchison, is at hand. It is a large paper, well gotten up, and is republican in politics.—Viadicator, Williamsburg, Pa.

"We have received the first copy of a new and neatly printed paper called the Bellefonte Republican, which was started in Bellefonte last week, by Messrs Brown & Hutchison.—Greensburg Herald.

"The Bellefonte Republican is the name of a new and neatly printed paper, just commenced at Bellefonte, by Messrs. Brown & Hutchison. Pittsburg Commercial.

Local Department.

BELLEFONTE, PA.

Wednesday Morning, January 20 ,'69.

THE Drug Store of F. P. Green will be removed, April 1st, 1869, from Brockerhoff's row, to the new Hotel of Bush & McLain, over the creek. Jan. 20tf.

AGAIN DELAYED.—We were again delayed this week one day in the publication of our paper, owing to the fact that we were getting the gas pipes into our office, and on account of the unavoidable delays always consequent upon the starting of a new paper. We will soon be all right. Patience, friends.

WE are happy to say to our readers that the services of PHILLIP PHILLIPS have been secured for Bellefonte, Thursday evening January 21st. His fame as the "Singing Pilgrim" is world wide, and those of our readers who have not heard of him we would advise to say nothing about it, but simply buy their tickets early and push in with the crowd. We append a few extracts from prominent journals of America and Europe. Mr Phillips is author of several singing books which are used by all denominations of Christians. During five months of last year a single Western house, sold 66,000 copies of the Sing ng Pilgrim and Musical Leaves. Since the issue of the Musical Leaves, over 600,000 copies have been sold, and during the last two years orders have been received for 250,000 copies of the Singing Pilgrim. Mr. Phillips is therefore not only a popular author of sweet music, but one of the sweetest singers the country has ever produced. Every person who wishes a rich treat and who, for a short time, would have their thought directed from earth to heaven, should go and hear him.

From the London Sunday School Teacher.

On Wednesday evening, September 30, the Metropolitan Tabernacle was filled to overflowing with Sunday School Teachers and senior scholars connected with the South London and Lambeth Auxiliaries of the Sunday School Union, to enjoy an evening of sacred song given by Philip Phillips, Esq , of New York. The occasion was a musical treat, and will doubtless, as its promoters intended, prove an incentive to the more efficiently conducting the service of song in our various Sunday schools. The proceeds, after paying expenses, were handed over to Mr. Spurgeon's College.

From the Western Christian Advocate.

PHILIP PHILLIPS. — Those who have heard the sweet singer will have a lifelong recollection of him, for he always sings himself into the heart. His power is marvellous; whether in the presence of the highest dignitaries of the nation, at the conference, prayer-meeting, or Sabbath School, he charms alike, and rouses patriotism or devotion at will Nor is he great alone on great occasions, before vast assemblies. He is as touching and as tender in the social circle, with a select and admiring few.

BELLEFONTE PLANING MILL.—We paid a visit, a few days since, to the Planing Mill of Blanchard & Co. It is, we think, one of the most, if not the most complete establishment of the kind in Central Pennsylvania. We would invite our farmers, and all lovers of the curious, and of nice and exquisite machinery, to take a little time when in town and visit these mills. You will be amply repaid for your trouble.

We are pleased to learn that this firm has already commenced digging out the cellars for ten new houses, on the street leading along the creek from Bellefonte to Willow Bank, the residence of E M Valentine, Esq. These houses are badly needed; and when finished, will be rented at a reasonable rate, or sold on time to any person or persons who may wish to secure a home, and thus get done paying rent So soon as these ten houses are finished, the firm intend to build twenty more opposite Willow Bank, on the street leading from Bellefonte to Roopsburg. This is enterprise, and a move in the right direction. There should be three hundred tenant houses built in town this year.

Our capitalists stand in their own light when they neglect or refuse to supply the demand in this direction. It is people that make the town; but they must have houses to live in. Unless houses are furnished, they must remain elsewhere. Will not others of our monied men catch the spirit of Messrs. Holmes, Brew, Blanchard, Bush and McClane.

CONFIDENCE.—The bonds of the Southern States are in demand and rising in the New York money market, and the disposition to speculate in this description of securities is on the increase, not only at the regular Board, but in private circles. This is indicative of the growth of confidence that we shall "have peace." Another sign of confidence and good times is evinced in the crowds that daily flock to the Cheap Store of J. W. Cooke. Mr. Cooke has the confidence of the people first, because he is a clever fellow, and second, because, when he advertises that he will sell cheap, and thus induce people to his store, he invariably keeps his word.

GREAT excitement was created in New York city, a few weeks ago, by the action of the World, in securing from all the Groceries in the city small parcels, and then weighing them accurately, and publishing the results with the names of the Grocers. The exhibit showed that nearly all used short measures and light weights, and raised Cain generally among the dealers, but they didn't sue for libel; only growled. We can assure our readers, however, that our friend George D. Pifer, who keeps the fine Dry Goods and Grocery store, in Brockerhoff's row, next door to Post Office, gives full weight, and full measure, and moreover, goods of the first quality.

GEO. & J. P. BLYMYER.—This is the style and name of a very reliable firm. Dealers in Wheat, Rye, Corn, Barley, Cloverseed and all kinds of grain. Keep constantly on hand, at Milroy, Mifflin county, Pa., Coal, Plaster, Salt, &c., &c. The Messrs Blymyer are well known to the people of Centre county, as honest, reliable business men. They need no endorsement from us. If they did, we would give it with great pleasure.

FOR SALE,—Persons wishing to purchase a good horse, also a good cow, would do well to inquire at this office.—See advertisement.

REV. MR. ARCHER, the Pastor of the Presbyterian church at Clearfield was among the victims of the rail road disaster in Allegheny county last week.

HOFFER & BRO.—This old and reliable firm still continue to do business on Allegheny street. They keep everything usually kept in a Dry Goods Store. Sell cheap, and treat every person well who favors them with a call. The "Dry Goods House" of Hoffer & Bro may certainly be ranked "first class" Call in.

OUR young friends, both in town and country, are reminded that the Republican Reading Rooms, 2d story of Blanchards Law Building, are open every night and supplied with newspapers from all parts of the country and with other good reading matter. No more pleasant or profitable place to pass these long evenings agreeably can be found.

OUR neighbor B. V. Black, the butcher, has a cow which last week furnished his family with cream and milk for table use, and twelve quarts of milk to other families, and in addition nine pounds of good butter A cow like that is worth something. Of course she is well fed and sheltered, but that always pays. Can anybody's cow beat that?

THE frequent and heavy snows have demonstrated that the guard on the roof of the Brockerhoff House is insufficient to prevent the masses of snow accumulating thereon from sliding on to the pavement to the peril of passers by. It is also well calculated to frighten horses and get up runaways that might prove to be serious disasters. A remedy for it should speedily be provided.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—A child of Daniel Shuey, Esq., who resides at the end of the mountain, in Harris township, was fatally burned on Wednesday last. The calamity was occasioned by the clothing of the little one taking fire by some accident in the temporary absence of its mother from the room. It survived its injuries only about four hours. It was eighteen months old.

A FIRE.—On last Thursday morning, at an early hour, a fire broke out in the Boot & Shoe Manufeatory of our friend, Peter McMahan, but fortunately, was discovered before much damage was done to the building. The fire having broken out in the room in which Mr. McMahan keeps his stock, he was the heaviest loser. He is again at work as though nothing had happened, turning out first rate boots and shoes.

WHERE IS IT?—We have frequently been asked "Where is the Republican office?" and we invariably answer, in J. S. Parsons' "Republican" Building, just opposite Keller & Musser's Philadelphia Store. "Well, yes! But where is Keller & Musser's Philadelphia Store?" We answer, just opposite the "Republican" Building, Bishop street. The "Republican" is just opposite Keller & Musser's Store, and Keller & Musser's Store just opposite the BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN office. Keller & Musser are good fellows, and are selling goods exceedingly low. Call and see them. In common parlance, we call them the "fellows' across the way.

GROCERY.—It affords us pleasure to direct the attention of our readers to the Grocery Store of our old friend, Capt. M. Runkle. The Captain was a gallant soldier, and lost an arm while in the service of his country, fighting for the Constitution and the Union, the enforcement of law and equal rights for all. These are the men who should be remembered now. The Captain is not an office seeker, but keeps the best Grocery Store in town. He cordially invites the citizens of Bellefonte and vicinity to call and examine his stock, purchase, and by so doing, save money. See advertisement.

HOW TO BURN COAL.—Anthracite coal burns more freely when put in small quantities into the stove or grate Some one who has experimented says that it should never exceed six inches deep in the vessel containing it, and that a few oyster shells put in the stove occasionally, when hot, will prevent the formation of clinkers, or remove them if formed.—This is the age of experiments, and any of our friends who burn anthracite can easily test the value of the above hints.

Col. Shortlidge, dealer in Anthracite coal and wood-burnt Lime, at Bellefonte Coal Yard, says it is a fact. He more over says that any person who follows this advice strictly will save more than the subscription price of the REPUBLICAN each year.

CONGRESS.—This intelligent body of of public servants have been very busy since the holidays in legislating for the good of the people, and devising some practical method by which the condition of the country, financially, may be bettered, and specie payments resumed.—As far as we are individually concerned, we care not how soon they resume, or how long they postpone resumption, so long as we can go to the well furnished establishment of G. W. Fairer & Co, and secure all we need for greenbacks, at reasonable prices. See advertisement.

INSURANCE.—One of the most cogent reasons ever given, why a married man should get his life insured is, that the money would prove a great help to his wife's second husband, and might be the means of starting him in business. While this may be a very good way for a man to make money, we know of no better way for the people of Bald Eagle Valley to save money than to purchase all the dry goods, &c., they may want, from the enterprising firm of Quigly & Croskey's, at their new and cheap store at Eagleville, Pa. Men like Messrs. Quigley & Croskey, who have the enterprise to advertise their business, can be relied upon as trustworthy in every respect. There is no risk in "insuring" success to them.

OUR FUTURE.—It is stated that in Cleveland there are fourteen rolling mills in operation. There are also two hundred puddling furnaces with a capacity of 400 tuns a day. This shows that Cleveland is an enterprising place; but it is nothing to what Bellefonte will be in a few years. When we get our Hardware and Cutlery establishments under way; our Woolen Factories, Paper Mills, two or three more Planing Mills, and when the space between this and Milesburg is all built up with Wire Mills and other Manufactories, Cleveland will be no comparison. Think of what the population of Bellefonte will be! How do you suppose Howell, Gilliland & Co. will accommodate all their customers then? Their store is crowded now They are doing a splendid business, because they have every thing, and sell cheap.

(COMMUNICATED.)

Messrs. Editors:—Our young friend, Roland W. Curtin, son of Mr. Austin Curtin, of Boggs township, joined the 19th Kansas Cavalry, last Fall. The Regiment is under the command of Gen Phil. Sheridan, and is doing good service in guarding the frontier against the in roads and depredations of the Savages. The 18th Kansas is stationed at Fort Dodge, on the western frontier of Kansas, preparing for a vigorous spring campaign against the Indians

Sergeant Curtin, with an escort of fourteen men, was sent to conduct one of the officers from Camp Supply to Fort Dodge, a distance of forty five miles. They left the command before daylight, and arrived at Fort Dodge at 11 o'clock, P.M., and during the whole time, they were in sight of large herds of Buffalo. Sergeant Curtin killed two; but only took the tongues of them, showing that he was choicy in his selection of Buffalo meat.

The command killed over one hundred out of the same herd when they came along. The Sergeant could have killed as many as he wanted, if he had run his horse off the trail for them. The horse that Sergeant Curtin rides was trained for a Buffalo hunter, and will carry him into the midst of a herd of Buffalo.

Sergeant Curtin informs us that it is fine sport for the "Boys in Blue" to charge into a large herd of Buffalo, throwing the bridle rein down on the neck of your horse, and letting him run with the herd, while the rider is engaged in shooting away as fast as he can. The "Boys" often shoot away eighty rounds in one chase. The Sergeant thinks it would do the hunters of Centre county good to be there, as there is plenty of game, and a HOME for all in the West. T. G.

—We hope others will learn of our correspondent "T. G," and send us "items" of interest and the "local" news of their immediate neighborhood. In the meantime we hope that while Mr Curtin is enjoying such fine sport, that some "Big Ingin" may not get his scalp.

WEDNESDAY, Jan. 20, 1869.

FLOUR—The Flour market is characterized by extreme dulness and depression; and in the absence of any demand for shipment the sales are confined to the immediate wants of the home consumers. Standard brands of Minnesota extra-families are freely offered without finding buyers, and there is no doubt that a concession of 25c ℔ bbl would be made by holders on current quotations were it likely to stimulate purchasers. About 1,100 bbls were taken, including superfine at $5@5,50; extras at $6@6.50; Iowa and Wisconsin extra-families at $7@7.75; Minnesota extra family $7,25@8; Penn'a. and Ohio extra-families at $8,75@10,50, and fancy brands at $11@13, according to quality. We quote Rye Flour at 7,50@8. Nothing doing in Corn Meal.

GRAIN.—There is nothing new or important to notice in the Wheat market, and notwithstanding the light receipts and stocks the tendency is downward. About 4,000 bus sold, including 2,000 bus red at $1 85; 1,500 bus do at $1,90@1.92, and 3,000 bus common white at $2,10. Rye is steady, with sales of 400 bus Western at $1,62. Corn is in good demand and firmer; sales of 2,000 bus new yellow, afloat, at 90c, and 7,500 bus do. in the cars and from store at 90@92c, the latter rate for prime dry. Oats are without change; sales of 3,000 bus Western at 72@75c, and Pennsylvania at 66@65c.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE DAILY & WEEKLY TELEGRAPH

For 1868-9.

Prepare for the Cubernatorial Campaign.

Now is the Time to Secure a Cheap Newspaper for the coming Year.

The Republicans of Pennsylvania achieved a glorious victory in October and November, by electing their State and National candidates, notwithstanding the immense rauds committed by our political opponents. It now remains with the people to see that the standard bearers of our glorious party are properly sustained in their efforts to establish confidence in the stability of our institutions, renewed activity in all branches of industry, and the restoration of amity and good fellowship with all the people of our common country. That the TELEGRAPH has contributed its full share to the glorious victories recently gained will not be denied, even by our political opponents. Look at the result in our own county, where the editor labored night and day during the canvass, through the paper and personal visits to our Republican friends in the county—the unprecedented majority of twenty-one hundred and ten was the result! We point also with pride to the result in our neighboring counties of Perry, Lycoming, Union, Snyder and Northumberland, where upwards of six thousand copies of the TELEGRAPH were weekly distributed.

THE GUBERNATORIAL CONTEST.

While personally we desire rest from political turmoil, at least for a while, we can not close our eyes to the fact that our ever vigilant opponents are already preparing for the Gubernatorial contest next year; and as we believe that in time of peace we should prepare for war, we would exhort our political friends to make preparations for coming contingencies at once, and among your neighbors. If you have a Republican paper in your county that is true and reliable to the party, it should be preferred to those printed in other counties. After you have done this, and you and your friends desire a true and reliable Republican journal from abroad, we would recommend to you either the

WEEKLY OR DAILY TELEGRAPH.

They are published at the seat of our State Government, and will contain full reports of the doings of the NATIONAL and STATE LEGISLATURES. They will sustain our triumphantly elected leaders in the establishment of "PEACE" all over the land with all the power they can command.

The TELEGRAPH belongs to no clique. It of course has its preferences before nominations are made for office; but when once made, the TELEGRAPH has never failed, since it has been under our control, to sustain the candidates presented with the same energy and zeal as though its own personal friends were on the ticket.

TEMS OF THE DAILY:

1 copy, one year	$6 00
5 copies, " in one package (per copy,)	5 00
10 copies, one year, in one package (per club)	55 00

TERMS OF THE WEEKLY:

1 copy, one year	$1 50
5 copies, " (per copy)	1 25
10 copies, " "	1 00

Clubs of from 20 to 50 will be furnished at lower rates.

These terms will hardly pay for the cost of the white paper on which the TELEGRAPH is printed, and the CASH MUST ACCOMPANY THE ORDER. Address,

WEDNESDAY MORNING, Jan. 20, '69.

High Prices in the Domestic Market.

It is a general complaint everywhere, says the State Guard, that the high prices which prevail in the domestic markets of the country, are now grinding the faces and pinching the stomachs of the poor to a condition of starvation. From all parts of the country, alike in cities and in villages, the high prices of agricultural products demonstrate one of two propositions, to wit: that an insufficient proportion of our population is employed in agricultural industry, or that the cost of distributing these productions to consumers ought to be diminished. It may be that both of these propositions can be established.

The country needs more farmers, cheaper carriage, and fewer middle men. A direct tax on sales, as recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury, would tend to bring the producer and consumer into more immediate connection, and the profits which now accrue to middle men might accrue in part to the treasury, and be made available in payment of the national debt without impoverishing the people. The great monopolies which control the carrying trade between the east and west ought to be subjected to a wholesome competition, so that they would be induced to take a crop of corn from New York or Boston for something less than half its value.

Recent developments have shown that agriculture is a profound science, yet in its infancy, but susceptible of indefinite advancement. Improved implements and improved fertilizers have already done much to alleviate the toils of the husbandman and to increase farm products, but what the country needs is more farmers, better cultivation, and more agricultural products to increase our exports and turn the balance of trade in our favor.

The farmer needs more skill and a better knowledge of economical husbandry. The wastes in fertilization and upon farms, if properly economized throughout the country, would pay the national debt in a few years.

Public attention needs to be aroused to the importance of this great industry. The farmers of the country want to be made to appreciate the true grandeur of their calling. The idle population in the cities ought to be induced to go to the country. The rich should be induced to engage in agriculture as an attraction, and the poor as an useful employment. Homes among farmers ought to be found for the boys and girls of the cities that are now being reared in idleness and vagrancy, where they might be taught useful industry, and be trained to be virtuous and worthy citizens.

If the hordes of stock jobbers and speculators, and half the petty traders that are now living upon the honest industries of the people would abandon their callings, and turn their enterprize and industry to developing the agricultural resources of the nation, we should have but little more of hard times, or of the national debt. It is difficult to imagine what the genius, energy, and resources of Vanderbilt and Drew would have wrought out if they had been applied to developing the agricultural resources of the prairies of Illinois. They would have harnessed the elements to till the State, and fill the markets of the world with its products.

How to Grow Plums.—The Rural American says: "There is a secret about plum raising. We have discovered it in traveling over the country. We never visited a large plum orchard in our life that we did not find plenty of the fruit. And we never visited any place with eight or ten trees and found a good crop of this fruit. Now these facts set us to thinking; and the result of our thoughts is this: that it is very easy to have all the plums you want to eat and sell.—The secret connected with plum raising is to plant plenty of trees, so as to give fruit to the curculio and to yourself also. If you will plant fifty or a hundred trees, you will have fruit enough for everybody. Every such orchard that we ever visited had plenty of ripe fruit. Some even complained that the curculio did not thin out the fruit enough—that the trees were overloaded. So we say to our readers, if you plant plums at all, plant fifty or one hundred trees, then you will be sure to have all the fruit you want. It sells for $5 to $10 a bushel in the St. Louis market, and is one of the most profitable crops raised."

Thirty-five years ago the net proceeds of a majority of our farmers would not have paid the taxes of today. The net annual proceeds of today are nearly as much as the farms would have sold for then.

In Western Massachusetts a company of farmers with their wives meet at some good tavern, in December, talk over matters, and have a good dinner and a good time.

The best bank ever known is a bank of earth; it never refuses to discount to honest labor. And the best share is the plow-share, on which dividends are always liberal.

The general experience among women is, that if they follow the newspaper recipes for cooking, they have stuff which only very hungry folks will eat.

There are six thousand acres of grapes in Ohio.

Tobacco for Lice on Animals and Plants.

"What is the best method of killing lice on calves and cattle, and will the same thing kill fleas on dogs?"

I have found by experience that a strong decoction of tobacco will destroy vermin on either animals or plants. I have used it extensively during many years, for destroying ticks on sheep and lambs; have dipped thousands of them in tobacco water, made by boiling coarse, damaged, cheap tobacco, or stems and waste, in water, and have found it an effectual cure for the scab, which disease is caused by the working of an insect or mite in the skin of the sheep. It is a new sovereign remedy for the blue lice on cattle and horses.

Tobacco water will destroy the aphis, or plant louse. Gardeners find their greenhouse plants need to be submitted to a deluging of this wash occasionally, to place them in a condition to become healthy and vigorous. When applied to fruit trees, if coarse, waste tobacco is used, add one pound of copperas to five gallons of the wash. Plug tobacco contains copperas in quantities sufficient to kill any animal, who has not accustomed himself, by slow degrees, to its use.

Almost every tree or plant is infested with an injurious insect, peculiar to itself, which preys upon its substance, and will, if in sufficient numbers, destroy its vitality. The hop, in sections infested with the hop aphis, is frequently either wholly or partially destroyed; when, by one or two thorough applications of tobacco water, by means of a force pump or garden engine, as they commence their work, the whole aphis army might be swept away. When the vine is trained low, upon seven feet stakes and twine, a garden engine is unnecessary, as the wash can be applied as effectually, and with less waste, with a common large hand syringe.

Tobacco smoke will stupify any animal, and, used in a sufficient quantity, has a fatal effect upon all which plug tobacco will destroy. Indeed there seems to be but one animal—the chief of the class mammalia—upon which tobacco, in either shape, does not have an immediate fatal effect.—However, if that animal would otherwise be infested with insects, even trichinous in their nature, in the mouth, tobacco will keep them away. Perhaps that is their case.

If a sheep or calf is covered with a rubber or leathern spread, or thick blanket, and a smoke of tobacco is made under this covering, in half an hour or less, every tick and nit will be destroyed. Currant worms may be served in the same manner. This is not only an effective remedy against vermin, but a good use for a most obnoxious weed.—Cor. Country Gent.

Small Farming vs. Large Farming.

It is no less true now, than when the American philosopher said—

"A little farm well tilled,
A little wife well willed."

A disposition to extend the broad acres, own a large farm, and all the land adjoining it, is a great mistake; and, in nine cases out of ten, the real profits of the large farmer fall from 25 to 50 per cent. below those of the thrifty, frugal man, on his 80 or 160 acres.

There are a few instances where men may occasionally succeed, but they are exceptions to the rule of large farming. The large farmer has to expend more than the small farmer in the way of teams, wagons, implements and machinery, hired help, heavy taxes on large tracts of land, stock and personal property, which he necessarily has to accumulate; then, there is the wear and tear of harness and tools, the continual expense of keeping up fences, buildings, etc. Last, and not least, there must needs be a large amount of capital invested in all this necessary outfit for a large farm.

The small farmer on his 80 acres, or quarter section, with one good team, himself and a little hired help, or his own boys, if he has any, can perform his labor of improving his farm, cultivating and harvesting his crop, with a moderate expenditure; and when he foots up his accounts at the end of the year, will come out ahead of his large farmer neighbor. The great success in farming is, manuring, deep plowing and thorough tillage. This is more easily done on small tracts of land, and much more likely to be done, than on the large farm.

Small farming can be done more scientifically and systematically than it is generally practicable to have done on large farms; and the consequence is, that more is produced to the acre, than is the result of large farming.

If such is the fact—which is founded upon reason and practical demonstration—small farming adds to the wealth of our country, both in excess of products and the actual worth of real estate; which is more thoroughly and generally improved in small than in large tracts of land. It is manifest evidence of growing wealth and prosperity, to see the large farms and tracts in Missouri, being divided into small farms, and making still more new homes; increase our population, stimulate enterprise, build up our institutions, and make us a strong and wealthy State.—Cor. Rural World.

All orchard trees should be kept free of sprouts that start out from the base of the trunks of the trees; remove the soil and cut them clear off.

Handle cows gently if you don't want them to kick when being milked. They won't kick unless something hurts them or they fear something will.
